PERFECT:

Michael Beach '08 Scores 36 on ACT

Michael Beach '08

Michael Beach, of the St. Edward High School Class of 2008, earned a perfect score on the ACT college entrance exam. Beach is only one of two students, of a total 43,500 in Ohio who took the test in October 2007, to score a 36. Furthermore, he is just one of 63 of the 500,000 who took the October exam nationwide, to earn a perfect score.

Beach is also a National Merit Finalist. He graduated with an accumulative grade point average over 4.0 and will attend The Ohio State University after participating in an internship with NASA this summer.

His accomplishment caught the attention of the local media, as he spent the week after the announcement fielding interviews from local television stations and newspapers.

Flight Magazine Earns Superior Ranking

Flight Magazine, the student-produced St. Edward High School literary publication, received a rank of Superior (nominated for the highest award), from the NCTE Program to Recognize Excellence in Student Literary Magazines.

A total of 453 schools entered the 2007 program, with 62 nominated for the highest award, and only 20, including St. Ed's, received the highest rank.

NCTE's Program to Recognize Excellence in Student Literary Magazines recognizes students, teachers and schools for producing excellent literary magazines. The program's mission is to encourage all schools to develop literary magazines, seeking excellence in writing and school-wide participation in production.

Flight Magazine is moderated by Mr. Joseph Serraglio.

Graduates Share Success Stories on Alumni Senior Day

On Thursday, April 17, members of the class of 2008 enjoyed an opportunity to listen to advice and success stories from three prominent St. Edward alumni - David Keehan '90, Peter Elliott '80, and Ivan Hofmann '65.

Keehan is Vice President of Sales and Marketing for Advanced Polymer Coatings, a leading provider of technically innovative specialty chemicals. He has also coached high school football in Texas since 2001. His team won the Texas State Football Championship in 2005, after finishing as runner-up in 2004. Keehan and his family have been generous supporters of the Pre-Engineering Program, and toured the facility before meeting with the students.

Peter J. Elliott is a veteran law enforcement official who currently manages a staff of more than 300 as the U.S. Marshal for the 41-county Ohio Northern District. Since being appointed Marshal in 2003, Elliott has developed a number of successful nationwide programs, including Fugitive Safe Surrender, the Northern Ohio Violent Fugitive Task Force, and GREAT (Gang Resistance, Education and Training).

Ivan T. Hofmann is a veteran of the transportation industry, and former Executive Vice President and COO of FedEx Ground. After joining FedEx Ground in 1985, he played an integral role in building the company into a major competitor in the business-to-business, small-package market, bringing annual revenues above $1 billion. Now retired, he serves on the Edgeworth Borough, PA town council and the Carnegie Natural History Museum Board of Directors.

The successful alumni shared their personal experiences with the seniors and offered advice and insight for the graduates as they prepared to head to college and the workforce.

Keehan, Elliott and Hofmann also spoke to alumni during an evening social in the Kahl Center.

THE CHANGING FACE OF ST. EDWARD HIGH SCHOOL

Thursday, May 15 marked an exciting day for St. Edward High School, as the golden dome for the Robert & Paula Fairfield Chapel was placed atop the structure. The dome will forever change the face of the school, serving as our most public symbol of the Catholic education St. Ed's provides the young men of Cleveland, as well as the school's close ties to the University of Notre Dame. Both the Fairfield Chapel and Joseph & Helen Lowe Pre-Engineering & Technology Center will be open before the start of the upcoming 2008-2009 school year.

Bob Andrews '55 Honored As 2008 Alumnus of the Year

Mr. Bob Andrews '55, a well-known and admired St. Edward High School fixture, was honored as the 2008 Alumnus of the Year, Wednesday, April 16 during the Alumni Recognition Dinner at Windows on the River.

Andrews was introduced to the crowd of more than 200 by Dan Coughlin '56, who spoke of the importance of alumni like Andrews, who has given the school his time, his treasure, and his sons (Bob '84, Dan '86, Mike '88 and John '89).

Andrews is a member of the St. Edward Athletic Hall of Fame as a football and basketball player, as well as a past recipient of the Bronze Eagle Award for volunteer service to the St. Edward community.

St. Edward High School also honored Dennis Roche '65, John Curran '75 and Mike Stanek '77 with Bronze Eagle Awards. Both Curran and Roche are longtime members of the St. Edward Board of Trustees, and Mike Stanek has been an active volunteer at St. Edward since the mid-1990's.

Rounding out those honored that evening was Br. James Everett, C.S.C., who received the Br. Thomas Henning, C.S.C. Award as a non-alumnus who has provided exemplary service to St. Edward High School.

Swim Team Produces Five Academic All-Americans

Five members of the St. Edward High School Swimming & Diving Team have been named to the Academic All-America Team by the National Interscholastic Swimming Coaches Association of America.

Honorees include Jung Hoon Yang, Zachary Turk, Alex Street, George Shiekh and Samuel Geiger.

Over 286,670 students are involved in aquatics at the high school level in over 14,500 programs for boys and girls. Approximately 2 percent of those students are recognized as high school All-Americans.

The team's collective GPA is 3.390.

The team enjoyed great success in the water as well, placing first at the Lakewood Sectional Meet and 5th at the Cleveland State University District Meet.

Eagles on Foot Raises More Than $3,000 For Holy Cross School In Haiti

St. Edward Campus Ministry hosted its annual Eagles on Foot 5K Race/1-Mile Walk, Sunday, April 20, 2008 at the school, and raised more than $3,000 to support our sister Holy Cross school in Port au Prince, Haiti.

St. Edward High School has developed a relationship with Basil Moreau School in the impoverished, war-torn country, and has been raising funds throughout the school year to provide for the educational needs of the Haitian school and students.

More than 200 students, faculty, parents and friends of St. Edward High participated in the event, which also included a one-mile walk.

St. Joseph Academy Track & Cross-Country Coach, Fred Kieser, was the top overall finisher, with a time of 15:18.

Annual Golf Outing Yields More Than $7,500 For Alumni Scholarship Fund

More than 170 St. Edward High School Alumni, representing classes from every decade, met on Friday, June 6 at Mallard Creek Golf Course, to raise money for the St. Edward Alumni Scholarship Fund.

Hot temperatures and swirling winds highlighted the day on the course, where more than $7,500 was raised to support scholarships for relatives of St. Edward Alumni.

Special thanks is due to the outing sponsors, including: Steve Barry Buick, American Tank & Fabricating, Apex Sales Agency, Avon Lake Auto Parts, First Federal of Lakewood, Hahn Loeser + Parks, Hyland Software, Joyce Buick, Lake Erie Graphics, Rex Pipe & Supply, UBS Financial Services, Cleveland Printwear, SouthWest Golf Center, and The American Brass Manufacturing Company.

The date of the 2009 Alumni Scholarship Outing will be announced in the fall.

Jason Bertin '97 and Yoshi Nakamura '97 were members of the winning foursome, which scored a 10-under par.

EDWARDIAN PLAYERS PRESENT

BRIGADOON

St. Edward High School's Edwardian Players presented Lerner and Loewe's classic musical Brigadoon in the school auditorium during two weekends in April.

Brigadoon is the story of a Scottish village that appears to the world only once every hundred years, though to its villagers, the passing century is no longer than one night. If any of the villagers leave, the covenant with God that has made the village so magical will be broken and its villagers will disappear into the mist. During the story, two American tourists stumble upon the village, causing serious implications for the enchanted inhabitants of Brigadoon.

Hundreds came to see the Edwardian Players' interpretation of Brigadoon, and enjoyed the music and intricate set, which included the construction of life-like, 16-foot trees that served as the production's backdrop.

Brigadoon was directed by Mr. Bob Burns, with technical direction by Mr. John Goers '78.

St. Edward High School graduated its 56th class Sunday, May 25 at the Lakewood Civic Auditorium. As the St. Edward Community welcomes its newest group of alumni, St. Edward Magazine, and members of the Class of 2008, reflect on the unparalleled accomplishments of a class of scholars, champions, and community servants - a group that included 13 students recognized by National Merit, a perfect ACT score, contributions to eight first class performances by the Edwardian Players and award-winning music programs, as well as leaders of three state champion teams in the 2007-08 school year, plus a number of state final four appearances. They are a class that truly lived up to Fr. Basil Moreau's vision of education to completeness, excelling in every facet of what it means to be a successful product of St. Edward High School. Congratulations Class of 2008. You have made St. Edward High School proud.

A REFLECTION ON FOUR YEARS: The following is an excerpt from the speech delivered by Chris Crampton, Class of 2008 President, during the Baccalaureate Mass.

"Four years ago, each of us was wrapping up our 8th grade year. Be it in a public, private, or Catholic school, we were all at the top of our game and ready for a new beginning in high school. Despite the excitement, changes that we may or may not have been ready for were coming our way. We all quickly went from the top to the bottom of the social ladder. We were all "Herbies," and treated as such.

But as we moved through the years, we slowly changed from two hundred and some odd individuals into a community of brothers whose bond can never be broken. Through academics, athletics, arts, and service, we have all joined together, and grown together, pursuing not just the education of our minds, but of our hearts.

This brotherhood is what allows us to perform at the highest level in every facet of our lives. The high academic honors, first-class shows, and the athletic success at the state and national level can all be attributed to the work of the Holy Cross mission.

As a school and a community, St. Edward produces active and informed students. The result is an education for life.

Be it an inspiring teacher, a loving parent, a caring friend, an encouraging coach, or a thoughtful teammate, the people around us put trust in us and pushed us to accomplish all the things we have done. Individuals of the St. Edward community saw something in us and that is why we are all here today.

Throughout our years at St. Edward High School, the class of 2008 has come together in a way that will never be replicated. The strength of the bond that holds us together is unique and never changing.

But, as we move on through the next four years of our lives, I encourage you to never stop learning and never stop growing. Every day is a new day to excel and accomplish more."

Scott Luke '08 Earns Man of the Year Honors

Their photos hold a prominent place in the school's main hallway - The Men of the Year. Each of the young men exemplify the qualities of the true Edsman - character, leadership, community.

On May 19, at the school's end-of-the-year award ceremony, another name was added to that list of legendary St. Edward students. Scott Luke of St. Raphael's, was named St. Edward High School's 53rd Man of the Year.

A renaissance man, Scott truly embraced Fr. Basil Moreau's vision of being educated to completeness, participating in activities that developed both the mind and the heart as Moreau mandated.

When asked what it means to "be an Eagle," Scott wrote:

"My four amazing years at St. Edward High School have been the most spectacular of my life. I have had the opportunity to lead a Kairos retreat, wrestle for the greatest high school program in the nation, witness a basketball game broadcast on national television, and watch plays comparable to Broadway's best.

I was in complete awe of St. Ed's as a "Herbie." During my freshman year I was involved only in wrestling. I knew that there had to be more to high school than just athletics. Becoming a student ambassador my sophomore year was my first true step in becoming involved in the school. I began to spend a lot of time at school. From this point forward I tried to become as active as I could in student life, stepping out of my comfort zone and becoming a counselor at the Muscular Dystrophy Summer Camp. MDA Camp was a life-changing experience, and I was able to get to know several attendees and St. Ed's students in a different light.

Joining Service Club, however, has been one of my best choices at St. Ed's, as it opened the door to explore creative service opportunities. Spending time laughing on trips to the Cleveland Food Bank and just "hanging out" with other students while helping to coordinate the various Blood Drives have all been highlights of my high school experience. The memories from Mr. Wanner and the Service Club will last a lifetime.

Ever since I was young, I dreamed that I would follow in the footsteps of my father and grandfather and attend St. Edward High School. St. Ed's has been one of the greatest blessings in my life. Daily I think about the momentous happenings that occur within these walls. I am truly honored to even be considered a Man of the Year nominee.

Being an Eagle means being the man who consistently steps out of his comfort zone and faces challenges head-on while striving for excellence, and always putting forth his best effort with honor and integrity. St. Ed's has helped me develop all the tools to strengthen my leadership ability and solidify my character. I recommend to younger Eagles to seize every opportunity of your high school experience because it will pass by in an instant.

The friends I have made here at St. Ed's are remarkable and inspiring. The path of the Class of 2008 has only begun. Our graduation from this great school only marks the beginning of a great and strong friendship among Eagle Alumni. The Class of 2008 and all future graduating classes need to nurture these fraternal bonds and continue to soar to new heights."

2008: The Year of Many Championships

The Class of 2008 not only left their mark in the classrooms, but on the athletic fields as well, winning three state championships in wrestling, hockey and baseball. The rare feat of winning three state championships in one year has not happened in Ohio since 1998, when the St. Edward Class of 1998 led the wrestling, basketball and baseball teams to state championships.

Three additional St. Edward teams advanced to the state final four during the 2007-08 school year: Basketball (state finals), Lacrosse (state final four) and Rugby (state final four).

Five St. Edward coaches earned Coach of the Year honors in 2007-08: Greg Urbas (Wrestling, Plain Dealer), Eric Flannery '90 (Basketball, Plain Dealer), Rob Whidden '88 (Hockey, Plain Dealer), Dave Giorges (Lacrosse, OHSLA), and Danny Allie (Baseball, AP, Plain Dealer).

IRON EAGLE

As the youngest competitor in France's 2008 Ironman Triathlon, Kaleb Kaschalk '07 is raising awareness for cancer research

Swim 2.4 miles. Bike 112 miles. Run 26.2 miles. That's what it takes to be an Ironman. On June 22, Kaleb Kaschalk '07, will be the youngest competitor (19 years, 2 months and 5 days) to test human physical limits during the Ironman Triathlon in Nice, France. With most competitors seasoned athletes in their mid-30s, Kaschalk, who just finished his freshman year at Youngstown State University, has chosen to do something extraordinary not only to challenge himself, but to raise awareness and money for the Jimmy V. Foundation for cancer research, having lost his grandfather to the disease in 2006.

Kaschalk is committed to doing whatever he can to raise awareness for cancer research, as he has felt the impact in his own life, and knows it will impact the lives of so many others.

"Fifty percent of Americans are diagnosed with some form of cancer at some point in their lives," said Kaschalk during the interview for this article. "That means, of the two of us sitting here, one will have cancer at some point."

So far, in his quest to do something unusual to honor his grandfather, and fight for a cure of a widespread disease, Kaschalk has raised more than $3,000 and has caught the attention of his peers and the media.

He uses publicity, like features on Cleveland's Fox 8 News, the CBS affiliate in Youngstown, and The Vindicator, Youngstown's daily newspaper, to help raise funds that he will donate to the Jimmy V. Foundation, once he has completed the race.

To finance traveling halfway around the world to compete, he is using excess funds from a student loan, ensuring that every dollar of his $10,000 goal will go toward finding a cure and honoring his late grandfather.

His challenge to himself is more than just unusual. It is one of the ultimate physical tests that any athlete can put his body through - in constant motion for more than 17 hours, fighting heat, the waves of an unpredictable sea, and the rigors of hills that give professional cyclists fits during some of the most difficult stages of the Tour de France.

Underfunded and nearly underage (19 is the minimum age for competing in an Ironman Triathlon), Kaschalk is relying on swimming abilities that he takes away from four years of training as a member of the swim team while at St. Edward High School, a used road bike that he purchased on Craigslist for $500, and sheer will and determination, as he fights with his legs through the last stage, the marathon.

"Finish. Push myself to see how fast I can do it," says Kaschalk when speaking about his goals for the June 22 race. "It's me vs. myself."

Kaschalk hadn't always had it in his mind to compete in such a rigorous triathlon, but while planning to run the Cleveland Marathon during his senior year of high school, he read the back of an Ironman T-shirt that a man was wearing at the state swim meet.

"Swim 2.4 miles. Cycle 112 miles. Run 26.2 miles."

"All of the sudden a marathon didn't seem like that big of a deal," says Kaschalk.

With motivation passed along from his grandfather, he began training part time in December 2007, juggling his academic responsibilities as a freshman in college with the preparation to put his body through a severe physical and mental challenge.

With swimming as his strength, he focused on biking, the area in which he feels he is weakest.

For three hours a day, while he was in school, he trained - riding the bike for two hours and alternating his running and swimming for an hour daily.

Once on his summer break from school, he began to train in longer intervals, often spending up to five hours riding his bike through the Cleveland Metroparks simply to get used to the idea of spending that much time on a bike.

Kaschalk admits that the cycling portion of the race has him most concerned.

"It's unnerving relying on a machine," he said, of a bike that is not even designed for a triathlete.

But, his inexperience biking is just one of the challenges that he will face during the race. Beyond the fact he will be competing against 2,700 other more-seasoned athletes, many professionals, he will be competing in a foreign country, where he doesn't know the terrain, and will be battling the impact that the time change has on his body. He will also be traveling alone, and forced to train in Paris, where he will be staying for the eight days leading up to the race.

"It's nearly impossible to simulate the race conditions," he said, mentioning that he trains late at night to prepare his body for the time change.

But none of the challenges that lie ahead of Kaschalk has weakened his spirit, which is being fueled by the memory of his grandfather.

"The disease took him out so fast," Kaschalk said of his grandfather, who passed away on April 22, 2006 after a five month battle with cancer. "I am going to fight for him, and take the pain."

With training habits he established as a member of the St. Edward swim team, and inspired by Team Hoyt, a father/son pair who compete in triathlons, with the father pulling his son, who is afflicted with cerebral palsy, Kaschalk can see the finish line more than 140 miles and 17 hours away. He knows that when he gets there, he will have made his grandfather proud, and raised funds that contribute to one day eliminating such a devastating disease.

This issue of the St. Edward Magazine was printed before the results of the 2008 Ironman Triathlon in Nice, France.

HARUKI NAKAMURA '04 NFL DRAFT DIARY:

On Sunday, April 26, with the 206th pick in the 2008 NFL Draft, the Baltimore Ravens selected Haruki Nakamura '04, a one-time All-Ohio wide receiver and defensive back at St. Edward High School, and a celebrated football star at the University of Cincinnati.

Throughout his training for the draft, his brother Yoshi '97, kept friends, family and the St. Edward community up-to-date on Haruki's progress by passing along draft diaries that were being compiled by the Cincinnati Bearcat Insider. They detailed the physical and mental preparation that goes into impressing coaches from the world's toughest professional sports league.

"Forget about size. That's something I can't do anything about. David Pollack told me that the most overrated thing in the NFL or football period is height," said Nakamura in one of his draft diaries. "It has absolutely no bearing on how you play the game. It's your desire and passion for the game and how much you really want it."

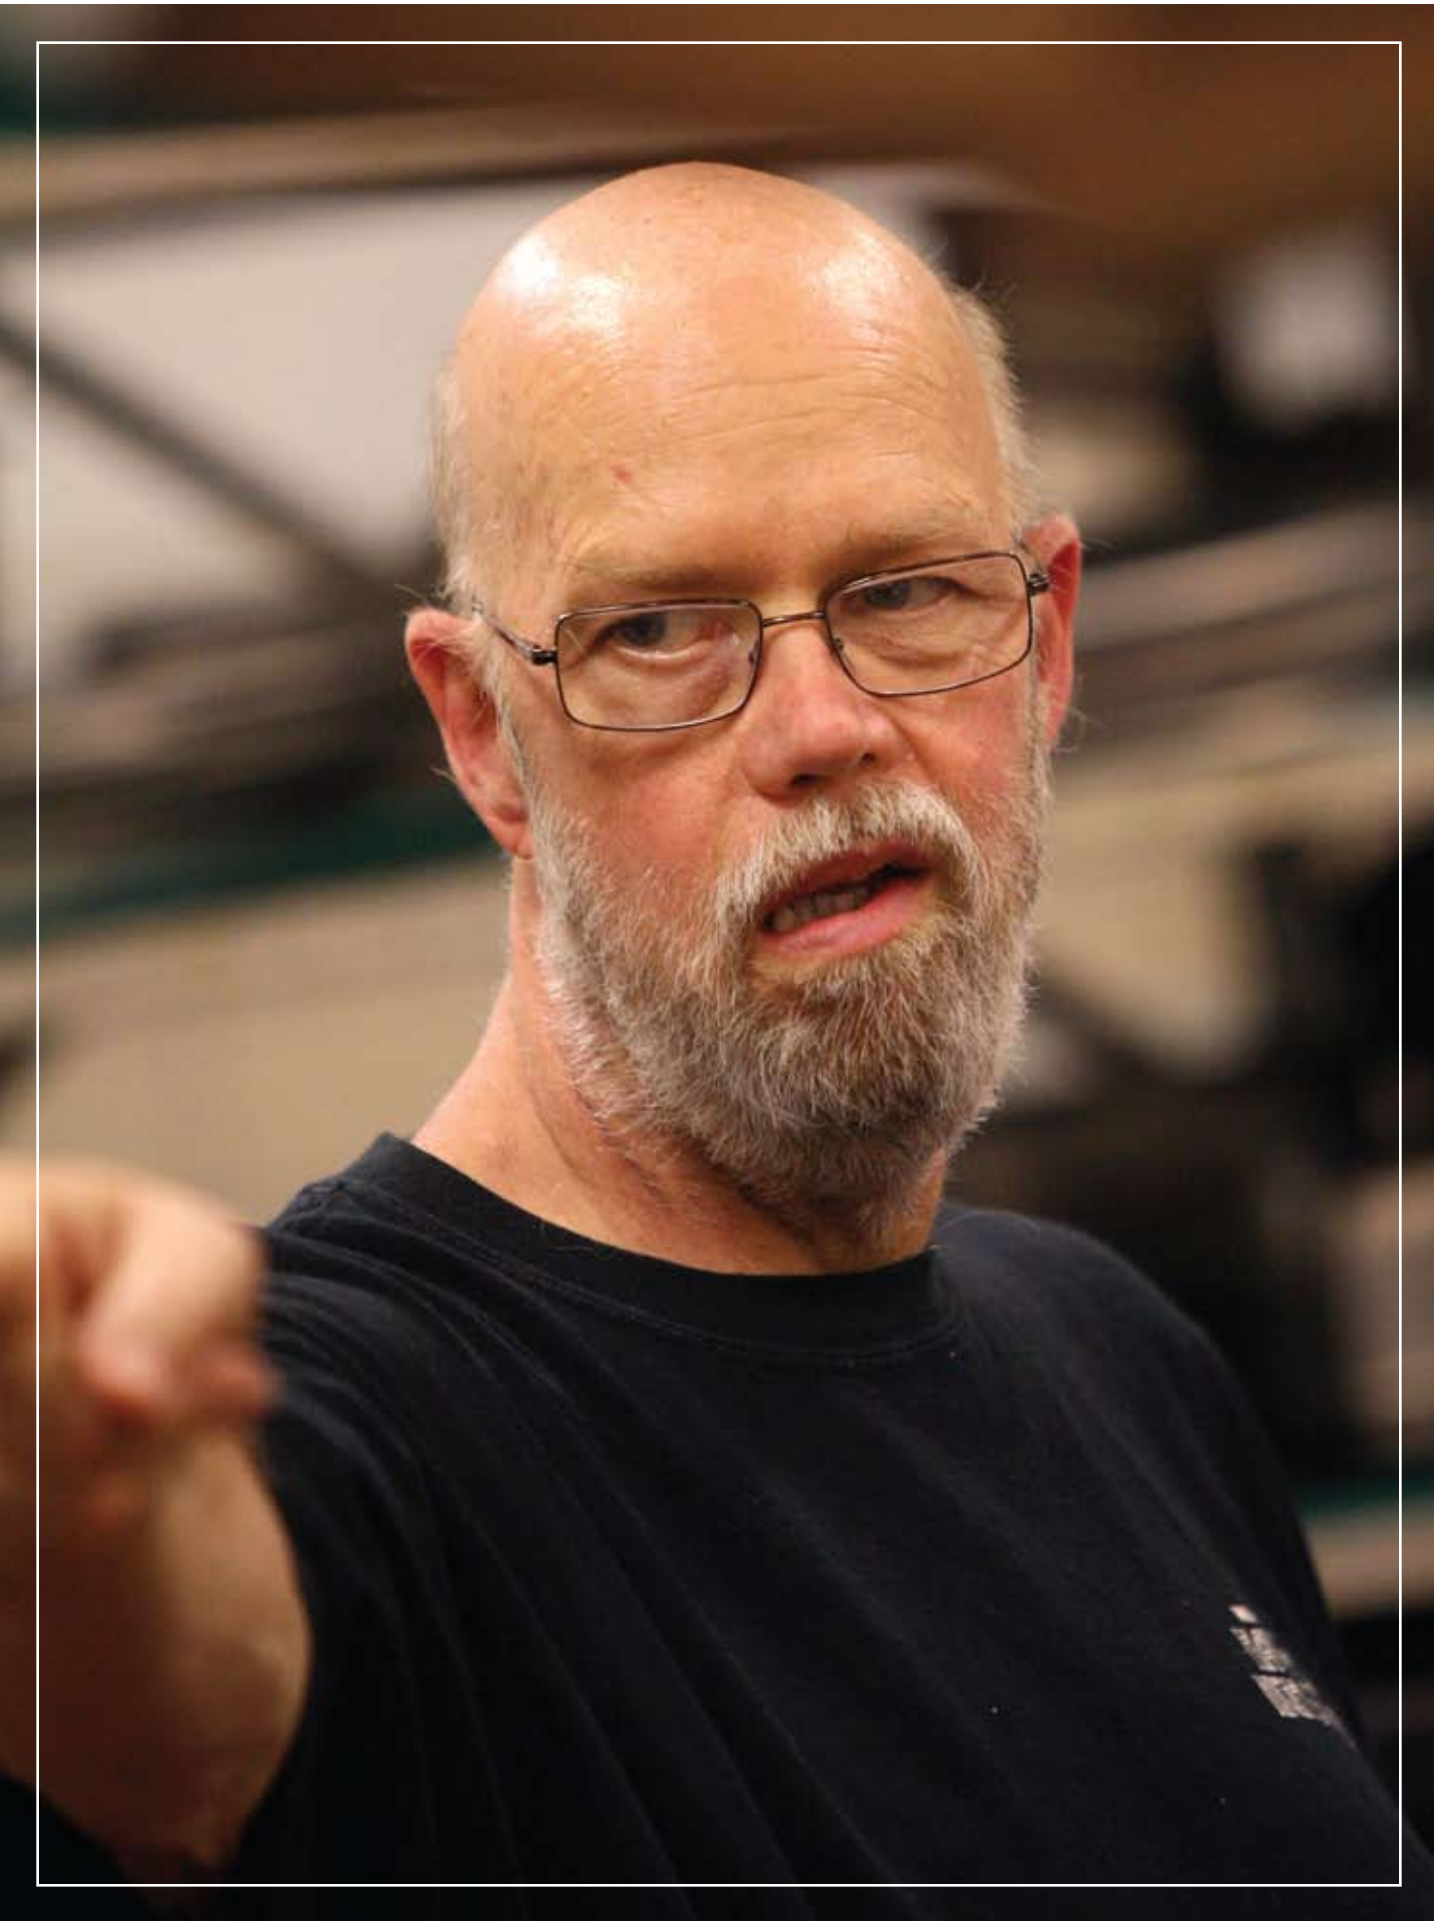

Baltimore Ravens Senior Vice President Kevin Byrne, a 1967 St. Ed's graduate, drafted Haruki Nakamura. Kevin shared his story with St. Edward Magazine:

"Ozzie Newsome, the Ravens' general manager and Cleveland Browns Hall of Famer, heads our draft. And, with that responsibility, Ozzie has the honor of calling a player and telling him that he is now a Raven because we have drafted him. Prior to this year's NFL draft, I kept kidding Ozzie that he had a chance to take a St. Ed's product and that he shouldn't pass up the opportunity. During the 5th round of the 2008 draft, I pointed to Haruki's placard that was still on our board: "Oz, he's still there." Newsome laughed and said: "If he's there when we pick in the 6th round, we'll take him."

With two teams ahead of us in the 6th round, Ozzie said: "Get your St. Ed's guy on the phone, and see if these teams are trying to get him." I talked with Haruki for about seven minutes when Ozzie got the word that we were on the clock. Newsome turned to me and said: "Let your guy know that he's a Raven." With that, I said: "Haruki, from one St. Ed's guy to another, welcome to Baltimore. We just drafted you. You're a Baltimore Raven. That was a proud and special moment for me. I thank the classy Ozzie Newsome for giving me that opportunity."

I was recently making a presentation to our rookies about working with the media and getting involved in the community. Couldn't help but notice that Nakamura was wearing a St. Ed's wrestling t-shirt. His brother Yoshi, among the great wrestlers on the annually outstanding Eagle teams, had been sending me information on his little brother Haruki for a year - and I kept passing that info along to our scouts. True Eagle brotherhood."

Paul Bosley's Success in the Classroom, Coupled With His Service to The Community, Make Him One of St. Edward High School's Most Prized Educators

Paul Bosley is fluent in the language of mathematics. His grasp on numbers is firm, and his usage is as smooth as a celebrated poet's way with the written word. It's his mastery that has translated into tremendous success in the classroom, as in the past decade more than 98 percent of his Advanced Placement Calculus students have earned a three, four or five on the end-of-the year AP exam, and college credit for their work. Seventy-percent of those students have earned the top score of five – unprecedented compared to other high school students across the United States. His success has made him one of the St. Edward community's most celebrated educators, a favorite among his students, and an asset to those preparing to tackle math at the highest levels in college.

Originally from Mentor, Bosley took his first teaching job at Santa Fe High School in Lakeland, FL, a co-ed Catholic school. It was the early-1970's, and he had just graduated from Florida Southern University.

During his stint as a math teacher at Santa Fe, the United States was facing tough economic times, highlighted by long lines at gas pumps nationwide due to fuel rationing.

The nation's economic situation forced a wage freeze at Santa Fe, and Bosley and his wife, Sally, made the decision to move back to the Cleveland area, where he partnered with his father in an automotive rustproofing business. While business boomed in the late 70's and early 80's, auto manufacturers began making better cars, and there became less consumer demand for auto rustproofing. He and his wife, recognizing the automotive trends, made the decision to get out of the rustproofing business and enter another tough industry - restaurants.

Partnering with his second-cousin Parker Bosley, a now well-known Cleveland chef, they opened Parker's, a small specialty restaurant at E. 68th and St. Clair.

Paul and his wife handled the front of the house and business aspect of the restaurant, while Parker made a name for himself in the kitchen.

"It was a tough business," recalled Bosley. "We were a small restaurant. If there was a snowstorm on Valentine's Day, we could lose 25 percent of our profit for the month."

After several rigorous years at Parker's, Bosley and his wife made the decision to go back to their roots - teaching, just as they had started in South Florida.

His wife was able to find a teaching job right away, landing at Regina High School, where she taught for 15 years.

But, for Bosley, finding a teaching job proved to be much harder than he imagined.

"I was sending out resumes and getting zero response," remembered Bosley. "I thought it would be easy to find a mathematics job, but it wasn't."

It wasn't until he was reading the Plain Dealer Sports page that Bosley got the break he was looking for. Then St. Edward Athletic Director, Don Murphy, had announced that he was stepping down from the AD position to serve as the school's Business Manager.

Bosley, who had served as the Athletic Director of Santa Fe High in Lakeland, recognized the school's need to fill the position, submitted his resume, and was called for an interview the next day.

Bosley interviewed with Br. James Spooner, C.S.C. '64, at that time the school's principal, as well as Mr. Gary Hitsman, but not for the open Athletic Director's spot, to fill an opening in the mathematics department - the job that Bosley had wanted all along.

He was hired into the math department, and began his tenure at St. Edward High School at the start of the 1989-90 school year.

Bosley is entering his 21st year at St. Edward High School as one of the institution's most experienced and most celebrated instructors. During his 20 years, he has witnessed the school change and grow.

"It's a different school," said Bosley, recalling the differences since first joining the staff in 1989. "We are certainly more academically minded."

But, Bosley has seen the school from more than just as a teacher, serving as St. Edward High School's Dean of Men for four years, from 1994-1997.

"I think everyone should have to experience being an administrator," explained Bosley.

Experience it, he did. After former Dean of Men, Ray Golic, had a heart attack in the middle of the 1993-94 school year, Br. James Spooner called upon Bosley to serve as the Interim Dean of is where Bosley has done his most remarkable work, and guided students to achieve so much.

During his third year as a teacher at St. Ed's, Bosley began teaching AB Calculus, preparing student for the AP Exam to earn college credit.

Shortly after, he took over the BC Calculus program, teaching the school's most gifted math minds, and tailoring the class so that more than 98 percent of his students earn college credit by scoring a three, four or five on the exam.

According to Bosley, his success is a direct result of the continuity he has with his students, teaching their junior Pre-Calculus course, and again as seniors in BC Calculus. Because of that continuity, Bosley knows all of his students' strengths and weaknesses, and can tailor his teaching style to them.

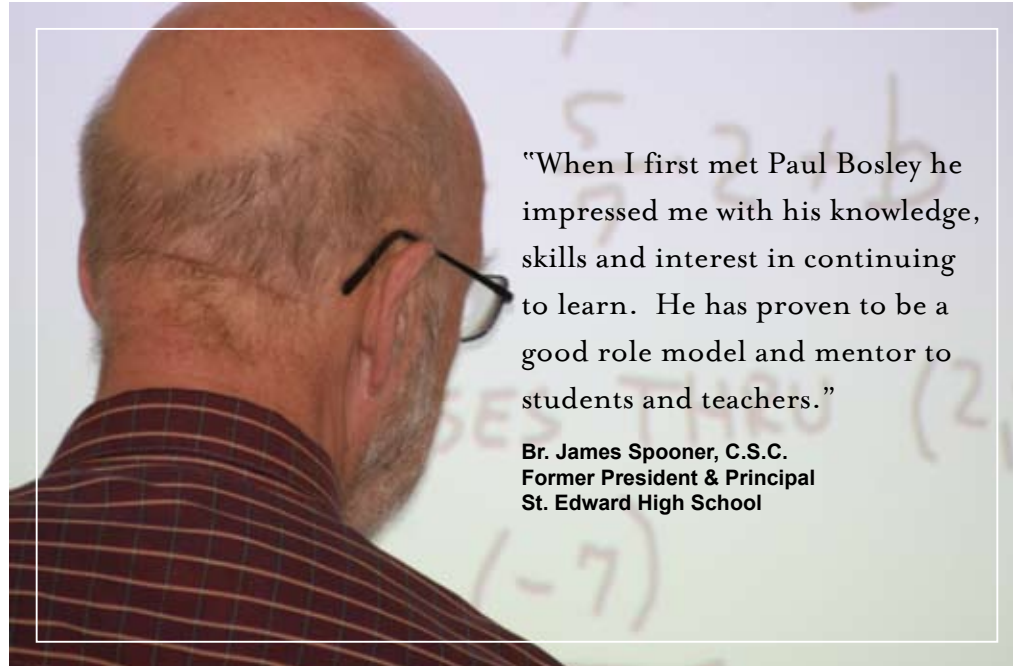

But, his teaching was not always as celebrated as it is today, said Bosley, who admitted that he was so disappointed with the results of his first BC Calculus class' AP test results that he wrote an apology to the students and the Principal, feeling that he had let them down.

Because he feels accountable to the students, parents, and the school, Bosley has been sure that the results his first class experienced have not been repeated, and that his students have performed at only the highest levels since then.

They have certainly produced, with 231 of the 234 students he has taught in the past 10 years earning a passing score on the AP exam, including 164 earning the highest score.

"It means as much to me as it does

"When I first met Paul Bosley he impressed me with his knowledge, skills and interest in continuing to learn. He has proven to be a good role model and mentor to students and teachers."

Men. He was named the permanent Dean of Men for the 1994-95 school year, while continuing to teach one section of AP Calculus while he served as the school's chief disciplinarian.

While he enjoyed experiencing the school from another point of view, Bosley admitted that the years that he served as Dean of Men were a challenging time for him.

"I became obsessed with making the school a better place," says Bosley, who went back to teaching full time at the start of the 1997-98 school year.

While he helped instill a strong sense of discipline into the young men who attended the school during his tenure as Dean of Men, the classroom to the kids and the parents," said Bosley, who feels he is directly responsible for what his students achieve in their math careers, instilling in them that only excellence is accepted in his classroom.

His excellence and contribution have extended beyond the numbers and into the kitchen.

As one of the founders of St. Edward High School's well-known Community Meal program, Bosley has been responsible for feeding thousands of hungry Northeast Ohioans on the fourth Wednesday of every month for the past 15 years.

Building on past experience he had earned while working with his cousin in the restaurant industry, and from a meal that he and his wife had helped serve when they lived in Painesville, Ohio, Bosley approached Mr. Michael Reiling about hosting a community meal at St. Ed's.

After convincing the school administration that the meal would play an important role in St. Ed's fulfilling its Catholic mission to the community, Bosley and Reiling served the first meal

"I am sure we have the best-prepared, best-staffed and best-funded community meal around thanks to the energy and dedication of Paul Bosley. He has blessed many lives. It is an honor to work with him in such a vital service." Mike Reiling, Co-Founder, St. Edward Community Meal in March of 1994.

The meal, as it has always been, was served in the school cafeteria, with Bosley running operations in the kitchen, while Reiling handled the needs of the volunteers and guests in the "front of the house."

"We ran out of food that first night," recalled Bosley, who says that the meal fulfills a sense of mission in his life. "All of the teachers here have a mission outside of the classroom. Some are coaches or club moderators."

Bosley's mission has been feeding more than 180 fresh, healthy meals to the hungry since 1994 at a meal that has become so popular that between 250-300 people visit St. Ed's each month to enjoy his food.

"I am sure we have the best-prepared, best-staffed and best-funded community meal around thanks to the energy and dedication of Paul Bosley," says Mike Reiling, who has been by Bosley's side every step of the way. "He has blessed many lives. It is an honor to work with him in such a vital service."

To watch Bosley in the classroom and in the kitchen, is to watch a man who cares deeply about the success of his students, and his greater purpose of giving back to the community.

He is undoubtedly thankful that auto manufacturers designed more rust-resistant cars, and that a small taste of the restaurant industry was just enough, because his experience paved the path to St. Edward High School where he has impacted thousands of lives in and out of the classroom.

Building a Network of Participation

By Dario M. Muzina, Vice-President of Institutional Advancement

In the early 1980's when St. Edward High School began an alumni and development office and asked Tom Glasenapp to encourage alumni, parents, and friends of the school to offset some of the school's growing needs and expenses, the office's goal was to get people to participate. In those early days, the emphasis was to build support by building participation at any level. It was a basic philosophy; with thousands of alumni multiplied by even a minimal gift, St. Ed's would raise a large amount of money. In 1990, after about 10 years of phone calls, direct mail, and special event fundraising, the giving or participation rate hovered at five percent and the contributions were, by comparison to the size of the St. Ed's community, even smaller. Last year, about 10 percent of the St. Ed's community made a contribution.

The power of alumni and parents partnering with St. Edward High School is even more important today. As our philanthropic program approaches its 30th year of existence, it is important to restate our original goal of participation at any level. This is critical to understand as every gift makes an impact on every student, every family, and every future that our school touches.

In my visits to alumni across the country in the last two years, the vast majority of Edsmen have told me that their four-year experience here meant more to them than their college experience. Most alumni said that St. Ed's had a profound effect in shaping who they are today and what they have accomplished in life. This impact and gratefulness is now building across the St. Ed's network and is beginning to fulfill the original goal of participation at any level.

As alumni chapters begin to formally develop and strengthen in cities like, Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Columbus, and Dallas, and alumni from the 1950's network with alumni from the 2000's, St. Ed's is solidifying its future. The network whose roots date back to 1949, with nearly 60 years under its belt, is learning to successfully and purposefully communicate on behalf of one another and ultimately on behalf of the school's current students and mission.

Our students learn how to write, think analytically and act ethically. These are young men who will someday invent solutions, and find and lead organizations that address major world issues such as poverty, environmental degradation, energy needs, global health, education, and cultural conflict.

When you participate in the St. Ed's network you are investing in the future. Your gift helps educate the minds and hearts of young men to have the competence to see and the courage to act as men of faith.

This is a mission that deserves your participation.

St. Edward High School will host the 12th annual Wings Auction, Saturday, October 11, 2008 in the school gymnasium. This year's theme is "Black & White Masquerade," based on the famous 1966 Black & White Party that was held at the legendary Plaza Hotel in New York City that was attended by all of the famous members of New York Society at the time.

Auction-goers will enjoy cocktails, hors d'oeuvres, a gala dinner, entertainment, silent and live auctions, and more.

"We're looking forward to putting on another first-class Wings Auction in October," said Kevin Hudson '97,

St. Edward Coordinator of Special Events and Alumni Affairs. "Between the top-quality food and drink, entertainment, and unique silent and live auction items, there will be something at Wings 2008 for everyone to enjoy."

Formal invitations for Wings 2008 will be mailed in August. Tickets for Wings 2008 are $125/person and can be reserved by calling 216-221-3776 x228.

JULY 2008

This has been an exciting year for the Alumni Association. We have had numerous social and fundraising events, and recently elected new board members and officers for the Alumni Association. The newly elected officers are Vice President Mike Carlin '66, Secretary Rick Mayer '77, and Treasurer John Slyman '97. The newly elected Board of Directors are:

With the help of board members, alumni, friends, and parents, the alumni association was able to assist and support the students in a number of ways. We helped to fund a group of students who traveled to El Salvador to help the poor in that area. In addition, through the leadership of Tom Kueller '79 and over 50 other volunteers, we presented a 4-day life skills program for our graduating seniors. This program provided information on resume writing, interviewing skills, networking, financial tips, legal issues and many other useful items. The feedback from students and parents was very positive. Thanks to Tom and his many volunteers.

Wills & Estate Planning Crucial to St. Ed's Future

By Jay T. Ansberry III '67, Senior Director of Development & Alumni Affairs

On Wednesday May 21, St. Edward High School presented a Wills, Estate and Gift Planning Dinner and Seminar Program. Our guest speakers included Judge John Donnelly '61, Presiding Judge of the Cuyahoga County Probate Court and Attorneys John Duffy '61 and Pat Ertle '82. Attendees were provided dinner, information, and answers to their questions.

We hope to be able to present these types of programs every year. If you have any questions or would like information, please contact Jay Ansberry at 216-227-2228.

Will Power: As Baby Boomers start to reach retirement age, most start to think about estate planning. Many of our alumni have been blessed with parents who knew the value of education. They provided their sons with the opportunity to attend St. Ed's, and then go on to college and successful careers. Because of this blessing, many have achieved far more than they ever thought possible and, in their estate-planning, desire to leave a legacy to provide future generations the same benefit.

Venerable Father Basil Moreau, C.S.C., founder of the Congregation of Holy Cross, spoke eloquently about sharing your bounty. He said, "Never underestimate the power of giving. It shines like a beacon throughout humanity. It cuts through the oceans that divide us and brightens the lives of all it touches."

There are many ways that you can leave your mark on a great institution like St. Edward High School, which has been an important part of your life. The cornerstone of most estate plans is a well-written will that allows you to distribute your assets as you desire. An outright gift can be made to create an endowed scholarship that will benefit young men for decades to come. You may choose a bequest of money, property or appreciated stock that can be designated for a specific use after your death. You may even choose to name St. Edward High School as one of your beneficiaries on an insurance policy.

Many people still think that planned giving is only for the very wealthy, and that institutions don't appreciate smaller gifts. It needn't be a large amount of money; many smaller gifts may add up to a large gift for St. Ed's.

When you are ready to plan your estate, the St. Edward High School Office of Institutional Advancement can help. Give the office a call at 216.227.2228, and we will send you a pamphlet describing various ways to remember St. Edward High School. Your gift will help ensure that future generations of Eagles receive a quality Holy Cross education providing them an opportunity to become leaders that have the competence to see and the courage to act as men of faith.

Sea of Gold at States

St. Edward High School basketball fans brought their spirit to Columbus on Friday, March 14, as the Eagles faced Cincinnati St. Xavier in the State Basketball Semi-Finals.

Clad in yellow Final Four t-shirts that were given to every St. Ed's fan, the crowd cheered on a come-from-behind victory and a berth in the state finals.

The basketball team was just one of six St. Edward teams to make it to a State Final Four in 2008 - three winning state championships.
